An Actress in Search of her Lover. A correspondent translates the following amusing anecdote from the Courrier des Etas Unis : One of the most beautiful actresses of a theatre on the boulevards received daily for about a month, a little penny bouquet of violets. She found the bouemployed competent male and female teachers to conduct abolition votes as possible. To show the utter worth- quet in her box or with the doorkeeper every evening as the play was about to begin, and this simple offering of an unknown lover affected her in spite of

> While acting she looked carefully around—at the boxes, the parquette, and even behind the scenesbut to no purpose; she saw nothing by which to recognize the man of bouquets. And thereupon she gave her imagination free reign, and the imagination of an actress is very similar to that of other folks.

> Was he a foreign prince, who wished to captivate her heart before placing at her feet his crown and treasures? Or was he an artist, too bashful to declare his passion? She interrogated the box-keeper, the tire-woman-murmured she. The other evening as she entered the theatre she received a fresh bouquet of violets, and this time the flowers vere accompanied by a letter. 'At last!' said she, and opening it by the light of a reflector, she read as follows :-

'Mademoiselle,-I have loved you for a long time, for is not beholding and loving you the same thing ? Every day I come to admire you, to applaud you, to delight myself with the brightness of your eyes and the charm of your voice-'He must be in the house,' thought the actress, and she peeped through a hole in the curtain. The audience had just commenced to assemble. She resumed her reading. 'Of your voice. You are indeed beautiful and charming, and happy are they who may approach A liberal credit, say one, two, three, or four years, will be it at the South. They could do all without it at the you. What would I not give to be near you always. Would the treasure of all the world be worth one of your smiles ? No!

Ah that is nice,' she sighed; and, turning the page, she continued. No, and yet I dared to love you,—to tell you that I love you—still more. I venture to beg you not to reject my homage. 'He begins to explain himself,' said she to herself, and I shall know'-and she continued :- 'my homage. If this expression of my love does not offend you, place this bouquet of violets in your bosom. Oh! then I shall be the happiest of men!" 'Well,' said she, 'no signature-no name given;

Newspaper Profits.

We copy from the Mobile Tribune: "The Mirror of New York estimates some of the net profits of the papers of that city. Those of the Tribune last year were $95,000, those of the Herald exceeded $75,000. The Courier and enquirer and the Journal of Commerce pocketed each $50,000, whilst the Commercial Advertiser stowed away $25,000; whilst the Express and Times, it is intimated, have "feathered their nests" with similar down. The chief weekly papers be considered comfortable.

It may be to some people a little surprising that the Herald, which is the organ of material humbug has cleared less than the Tribune, which is the organ of all manner of mental humbug. But the matter will be easily solved, when it is understood that the one appeals only to the baser temporal appetites, while the other appeals also to the baser spiritual (or fanatical) apetites.
